HANDMADE ARCHITECTURAL MOULDINGS

About Manor Mouldings

Established in 1985, over the last 35 years Manor Mouldings has built up an enviable reputation as a leading Irish manufacturer of internal and external architectural mouldings. Our exquisite plaster and concrete mouldings are made by hand in our workshop and finessed down to the very smallest detail to ensure total satisfaction for the client.

We cater for everything from period restoration work and deluxe hotels through to one-off luxury homes and large property developments with distinctive flair. No project is too large or small, no detail too intricate – we bring the same passion and experience to each and every brief and pride ourselves on delivering a flawless result every time.

From the Ancient Greeks to the Victorians, decorative mouldings have long framed the spaces in which people live. Intricate mouldings on pillars, ceilings, archways, window frames and door lintels signified prestige in ancient architecture, and were often commissioned from leading artists and sculptors of their time.

WHAT WE DO

Concrete Mouldings

External mouldings bring character and prestige to the façade of any property and are of particular interest to those wishing to restore or recreate the features of classic period architecture. From simple details such as quoins, to delicate additions in the form of a string course or dentils – external mouldings are a versatile and simple way to elevate any property beyond the 'ordinary'.

Decorative Cornices

Decorative cornicing has been a feature of internal architecture since the 16th century and was traditionally used as a way to beautify the roughly plastered interiors of ancient homes. The craft gradually became more and more specialised, and the designs more ornate, with plaster mouldings becoming a key feature of Georgian, Victorian and Edwardian architecture.

In our specialist workshop, we hand make decorative cornices that range from the most detailed designs to simple but effective finishing touches for any room. Customers can choose from a vast selection of stock cornices, while for restoration work we offer a bespoke service using a moulding process to replicate and repair existing cornices.

Ceiling Roses

Dating back to Tudor times, decorative ceiling roses are seen in almost all classical interiors and as well as being inherently beautiful, serve to disguise unattractive junction boxes for ceiling light fittings. Our handmade plaster ceiling roses bring distinction to any room and may be fitted singly or in groups for dramatic effect. Choose from simple and understated or ornate and highly decorative styles.

Hospitality & Leisure

Manor Mouldings is proud to have provided both internal and external architectural mouldings for some of the finest hotels and function rooms across Ireland. We work closely with architects and designers to identify the most appropriate mouldings for each individual property, ensuring elegance and authenticity of the finished look. Our mouldings have been used to restore historic properties to their former glory, and bring a sense of heritage to newly-built venues alike.

Whispers of heritage

Residential

High quality concrete mouldings can be used to add character and detail to a property, evoking a particular period or style and offering a relatively simple way to adorn its façade. As well as aesthetic appeal, mouldings can add value to property by increasing kerb appeal and are an ideal way for developers to create a point of difference between house types, providing sought-after individuality for buyers.

Restoration

From historic manor houses to individual listed homes, nothing brings greater satisfaction than seeing grand and highly detailed interiors brought back to their former glory. Manor Mouldings has vast expertise in complex restoration work, collaborating with conservation architects to recreate details that are hundreds of years old, or bringing existing plaster mouldings back to life by stripping back layers of history. Our team of specialists can recreate almost any concrete or plaster moulding for a finished result that is virtually undetectable.

Luxurious details still serve to lend elegance and enrichment to architectural forms. Used to restore period and listed features, or to honour classic architectural styles in modern buildings, they remain an important element of many spaces in which we live, work and play in the 21st Century.
